Course Language	English
Course Type	Elective
Course Lecturer	Asst. Prof. Seda Demiralp
Course Assistant	Hakan Mehmetcik
Course Objectives	This class explores the dynamics of political, economic, and social change in the world. It examines different political and economic systems and considers the formation of the first, second, and third worlds. It explores the different paths that countries may pursue to foster development and democratization, and helps understand the costs and benefits of these policies. Throughout the class students analyze successful and failed examples of each path and consider their applicability to different countries. Finally, the course turns its focus to our own backyard, the Middle East and considers examples of non-Western modernities such as modern Islamist movements and sources of Islamic economic development.
Course Learning Outcomes	By the end of this course, students will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Identify the factors that lead to economic and political development</li> <li>• Understand the relationship between capitalist development and democratization</li> <li>• Analyze the causes of underdevelopment and authoritarianism in the world</li> <li>• Understand the formation of international financial institutions such as the IMF and the World Bank, and the impact of their policies on the political-economy of the developing world</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Analyze the political-economy of a variety of countries based on the theoretical information acquired in class</li></ul>
Course Content	Concepts of political change, modernization and Westernization. The relation between modernization and Westernization; different responses to modernization efforts (rejectionism, Kemalism, reformism).
